

The isle of Laesoe

Læsø's 114km² of scenery is of extraordinary beauty. The island is situated in the Kattegat and thus is accessible only by sea or air. The sky is high, the air is clear and clean, and in the deep of the night the only sounds heard are those of nature herself. Læsø is the largest island in Kattegat.

Three fourths of it are lying wild and free as plantations, moors and salt marshes. There are webfooted and wading birds in abundance and the flora excels in unique species like wild orchids among others. On your excursions you can disappear and find shelter in the warm, white sand of the dunes, you can swim in the crystalclear water or you can ride under the open sky and enjoy the woods and the wet marshes
